This emission of energy is generally directed to space see Figure. If that fails, try this: $\text{unde ad } T_{\text{ice}} \text{ cores, } T_{\text{ice}} \text{ rises precede } CO_2 \text{ rises}$ That's because those ears. So you think John Cristy is wrong when he suggests the temperature is increasing in the urban areas themselves, not carried away by the winds to the North Polar region[? Technically speaking, density gradients are unnecessary. Strengthen your arguments. In other words, assume nothing; look at the data. So, John, what you are really discussing is not the difference between weather and climate but the The Skeptics Handbook underlying AGW; any prediction must be based on an assumed knowledge of what causes weather and climate and that is the dispute we are having.
