The first book of its kind, Faith No More will appeal to anyone interested in the

Regardless, the book does provide some decent information regarding the decision to leave a specific religion. Similarly with the question about how life is now, it's well known that people after making an investment are going to overemphasize the good parts of it to others, regardless of how it actually performs for. Just as we should not judge those in varying religions nor should those who choose a secular life be judged I enjoyed reading the different paths people of all different faiths took to their destination of apostasy.

And look, here I am climbing on my soapbox. There are those who actively, consciously tried for many years to keep their faith, but finally admitted that they did not believe and no longer wanted to keep up the charade.
