In a similar task with drawings, children were more likely to say that the puppet was correct in using the alternative label. As children are scaffolded by educators to participate in more varied experiences with writing, their ability to create complex, multimodal texts develops: Young children begin to explore written communication by scribbling, drawing and producing approximations of writing. We celebrate every image and give them pride of place on the fridge door. LaurieJanuary31, They provide a common reference point for the teacher and the child to discuss the story before it is written, and this is an important additional oral rehearsal that strengthens the quality of the writing. A label created by four-year-old children out of clay, to be placed with an art installation they created.

In these experiences, educators can model and scaffold at different levels to use information and communication technologies to access information, investigate ideas and represent their thinking. If you are a seller for this product, would you like to suggest updates through seller support?
