The two most prominent among them were Stephen and Philip. From him Luke undoubtedly received precious information about Christian beginnings, although he was not Luke's only source. Since I am primarily a historian of Christianity and only incidentally a student. For all practical purposes, then, Christianity enters history with the appearance of Saint Paul whose writings are the earliest datable Christian documents. You'll often hear Paul, or you might also hear the name Saul, or Paul of Tarsus, these Faith & Conflict: Early Christianity all referring to the same person. As has been so well argued by Lamin Sanneh, the activity of Christian translation has brought unique spiritual empowerment to those who now, often for the first time, hear the message of Scripture in their mother tongue. Clifford concluded that we have a duty to act only on well-founded beliefs. Given such complexity, it is natural that throughout Christian history both those in the tradition and those surrounding it have made attempts at simplification.
